Happy Friday! It's been a fantastic first week here at Terramor. This morning we worked on reading and took a walk through Pride Village. We saw how different it's looking through the winter. The students decided that it definitely needed some revamping and winterizing. They worked together phenomenally, and built up some of the structures.

This afternoon, we did some yoga during quiet time, and then explored a few areas in the woods.

A large part of the group has been working on a song that they've written on their own, and now they are working on a choreographed dance to go along with it! They've been practicing quite a bit! We also celebrated Henry's 6h birthday today. The children enjoyed cupcakes after lunch to celebrate!

Have a great weekend!
